Game to Sbarter: account binding journeys

How a Game player's game account gets permanently tied to their Sbarter account, based on the binding proposal. Journey A starts in the Game. Journey B starts in the Sbarter app. Both end at the skill-band check before the player joins a contest. The binding itself never asks the player to type anything. Yellow flags mark what the Publisher needs to confirm.

DESIGN PRINCIPLES

- The publisher never rebuilds what Sbarter already does. For onboarding, Game has two jobs: add the player's account ID to its links, and answer one binding call. Sign-up, identity checks, funding and skill bands all live in Sbarter.
- Keep switching between Game and the Sbarter app to a minimum. Binding needs at most one round trip, once per player.

Binding

A permanent one-to-one link between a Sbarter account and a Game account, so match results from the Publisher's servers can be paid to the right wallet. It can't be changed.

Game account ID

The player's unique Game account number. Game attaches it to every link it opens into Sbarter, and it's what the binding uses.

Deferred deep link

A link that remembers where it was going (and the Game account ID) through an app store install, then carries on at first open.

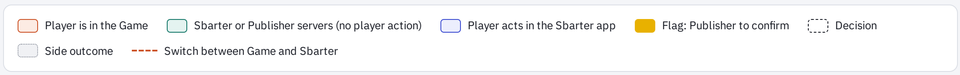

Link code

A one-time code Sbarter sends to the Game in Journey B. Publisher's servers send it back with the player's Game account, proving both belong to the same player. It works once and then expires.

Skill band

Contest eligibility by level, using the Game skill rating from the Publisher. Launch: two bands. Entry is capped by rating. Open is open to everyone.

Journey A: starting in the Game (proposal 1.1)

The player taps a Sbarter link inside Game. New players see a Game welcome webpage first. The link carries their Game account ID, and the binding is created when they register or log in.

AGREED

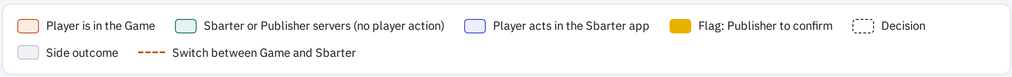

- New players without Sbarter see a Game welcome webpage first: a quick guide, and why Sbarter is the Publisher's trusted technology partner for wagering.
- New players follow the standard Sbarter sign-up. The only information carried from the Game is the account ID, and possibly the Game player name.
- Full account registration comes before any skill check.
- A link that isn't tied to a contest (e.g. the Game menu) opens the browse tab, pre-filtered to Game challenges and tournaments.

NEEDS PUBLISHER

- Step 7: the mechanism that connects the Game account ID to the Sbarter account.
- Step 7a, decision required: Sbarter prefers only one Game account per Sbarter account, to reduce cheating. Publisher to share their view.
- Step 10: a way for Sbarter to check each player's Game skill rating.
- Whether Game can attach the account ID when a player taps a Sbarter link shared outside the game (store page, Discord, creator links).

OPEN QUESTIONS

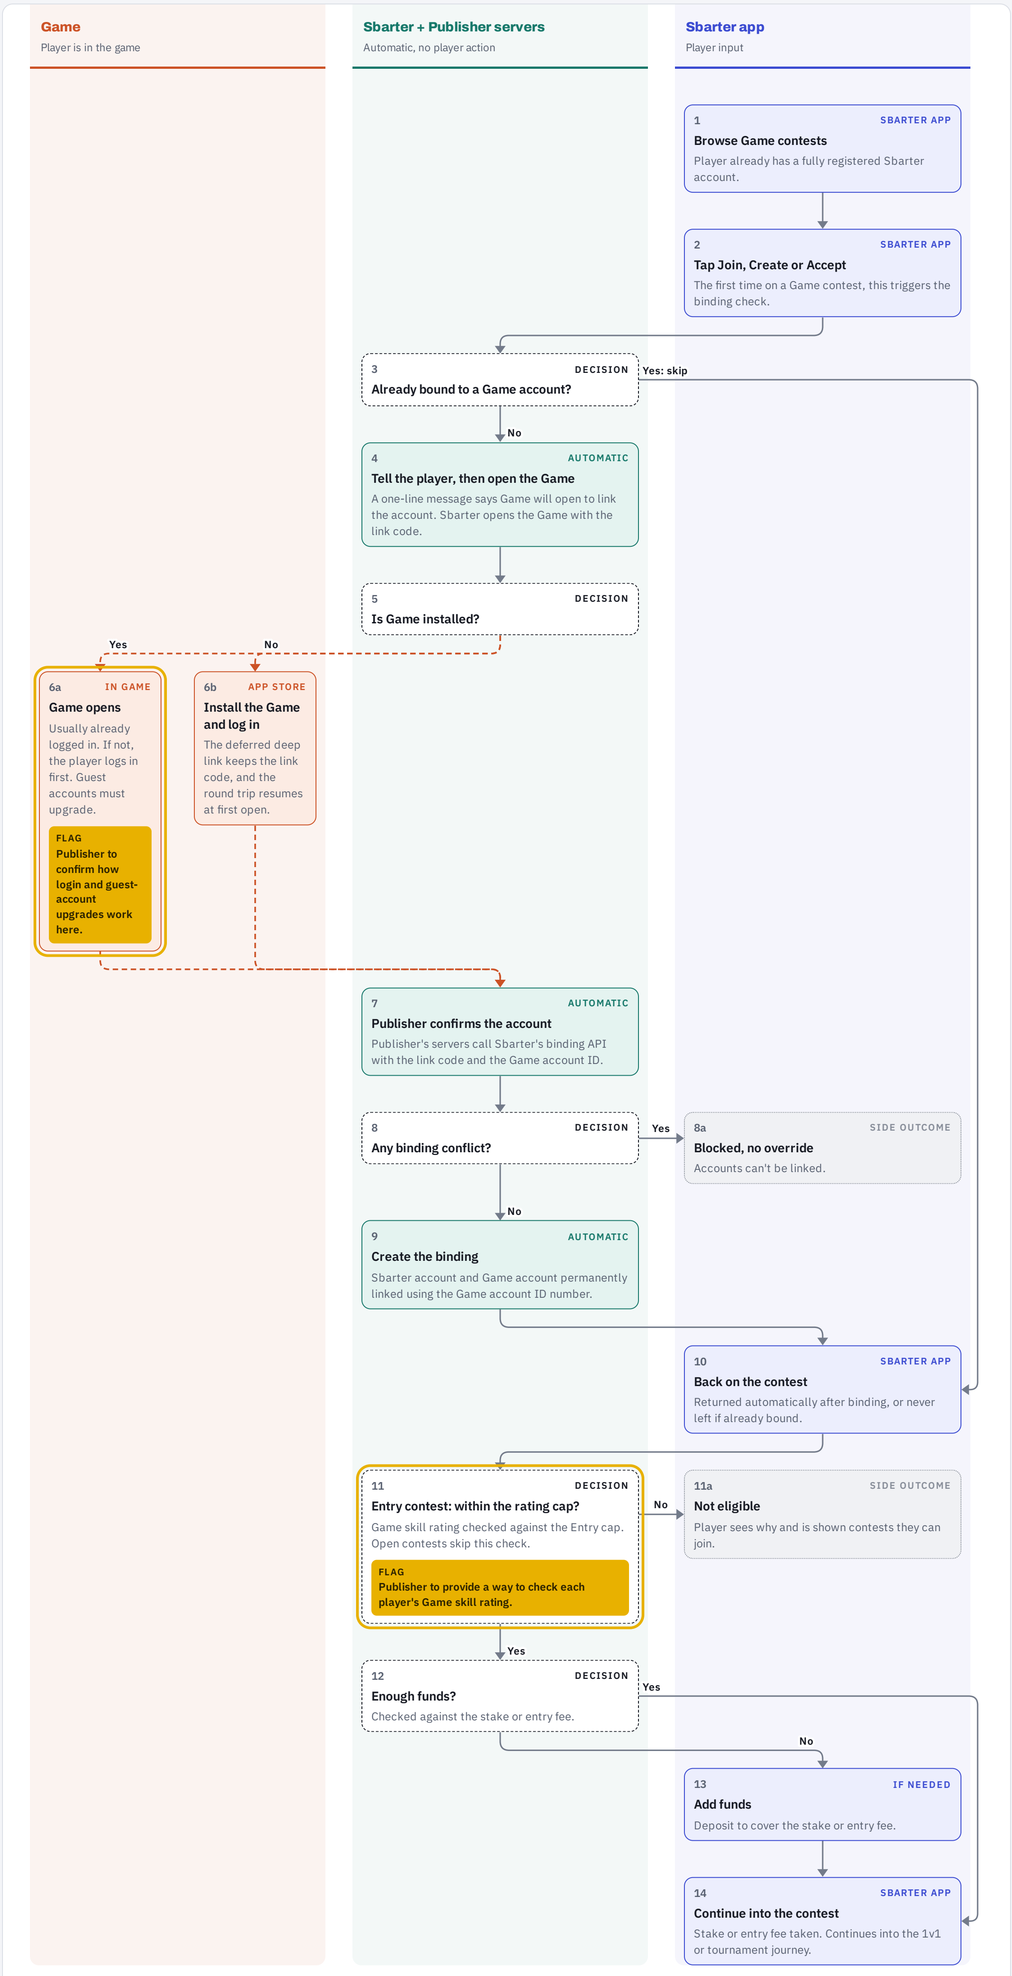

1. Q1 Will players be known by their Game player name in challenges and tournaments, or by a Sbarter username chosen at sign-up?
2. Q2 Does full registration include adding funds? This draft assumes funds are added at the first join, create or accept (steps 11–12).

Journey B: starting in Sbarter (proposal 1.2)

A Sbarter player taps Join or Create on a Game contest for the first time. Sbarter makes one round trip through Game to find out which game account is theirs.

2 Game steps · 5 app steps · 8 automatic steps

AGREED

- Skill bands use the Game skill rating only. Open contests are open to everyone, so only Entry contests run the band check.
- The player has already completed full Sbarter registration before this journey starts.
- If Game opens and the player isn't logged in, they log in first. Guest accounts must be upgraded to a full Game account before binding.

NEEDS PUBLISHER

- Step 6a: exactly how login and guest-account upgrades work when Game opens for binding.
- Step 8a, decision required: Sbarter prefers only one Game account per Sbarter account, to reduce cheating. Publisher to share their view.
- Step 11: a way for Sbarter to check each player's Game skill rating.
- For the Publisher and the developers: how long the link code stays valid, e.g. long enough to install the Game.

ASSUMPTIONS

- A one-line message tells the player Game is about to open to link their account.
- What a blocked player sees, and how they reach support, is parked for now.
